TAX EFFECTIVE?

By: Econ Dinkle on October 9th, 2022

The tax put in place by Vibbo Munts has been the talk among our economists here at Dinkleman Prints. First and foremost, our economists are questioning the motives behind the tax. Why does the server need a tax in the first place? Well, we reached out to Vibbo Munts on the subject, and this is what he had to say,

"The tax is there to provide the server with a 'bank' of sorts," he said,

"without the tax we'll be forced to add money into the economy whenever we must pay for expensive things and we'd soon find that a hundred Jesus Pennies is worth absolutely nothing."

Vibbo seemed to think the server's economy would be inflated without the tax system. But many seem to believe it is too early to implement such a system since the server has minimal expenses to deal with. Not to mention the lack of a clear economic system. The council has been silent since last week, and only one more day is left until the end of the system competition. Our economists here at Dinkleman Prints, myself included, have found that the tax is doing more harm than good.

An active server member (and we stress the word active) will make only about 200 Jesus Pennies in a week. With the tax set at forty every other day and sixty for people above a thousand, it's likely that anyone making less than 200 a week will see a decrease in their bank accounts and those making 200 a week will only profit 40 pennies for the entire week! So the bank is essentially taking a massive money away from active and inactive members alike.

"It will incentivize members to begin their contributions by threatening their wealth with taxes." So said Pickson, a popular alt account for Vibbo Munts.

But this is misleading because our economists found there is little to no incentive for members to want to keep their money, let alone contribute to the economy.

"The members don't care for money, so why would they care for the tax." Said Lead Dinkleman Economist Boogy Coy, "The inefficient and accident-prone system is bound to create inconsistency problems." He added.

And that is true. So far, Vibbo Munts' system has avoided putting anyone into debt. But this is no longer the case.

One member, Nic, AKA Monke, was thirty-one pennies in debt because of accidental taxation. This is what he had to say on the subject,

"I can't make a decent living out here without the bank stealin' my good earned money." When asked about if the streets of server was tough, he replied, "Hell yea! But by the power of Abruhomie Linquesis Imma make it."

As you can see, the server's economy needs severe revision, or more street folk, such as Monke, might be wronged. In the glorious name of the urban icon, Abruhomie Linquesis, may we all see economic relief.

KING LOOGY TO BAN IMPORTS OF MILITARIZED BUBU CHILDREN

By: Harris Kelly September 3rd, 2062

Loogy's free Kingdom in Europe has just decided to ban foreign imports of militarised bubu children; the decrepit, ghoulish, and feral creatures are known for their devastating diseases and acid spit. King Loogy made this decision three days ago in light of the ending of the Apachian War. In a press briefing yesterday, King Loogy said he had made the decision for 'environmental reasons.' Pointing to the Monarch's Royal Lady of the Environment, Susan Baron.

"bubu children account for roughly 67% of all missing person reports in rural wooded areas." She stated. "This is because a shipment of bubu children militarised or not, may see up to 10% of their total load lost due to containment breaches. This is a serious number, and we must not allow more suffering. We must do better at containing these beasts lest we end up in another war."

Now while it's true that bubu children account for 67% of all missing person reports, others claim that militarised bubu children have become an essential part of defending against enemies and, more importantly, other bubus. Here's the Chief of Ping stating his piece during an interview two days ago,

"The King fails to recognise the incredible killing force of a single bubu child. During the Apachian War, when enemy forces stormed the beaches of the Central States of Jorge, what did they use to defend their land? They used bubu children. When West Arithian forces invaded Africa, what did the AA do to counter? They sent in bubu children to devastating effect."

But using bubu children to attack enemies isn't all people are talking about. Senior Bubuoligiost at Master Loogy University, Nelly Court, argued that bubu children avoid other bubu children whose scent indicates that they are part of a different bubu 'tribe' so to speak.

"Bubu children are in many ways territorial. They very much do not like to cross each other's territory." She stated. "If we want to decrease the number of casualties of bubu children in our Kingdom, we must first learn to tame them here. And it starts with militarising them."

But whatever happens in our future, one thing is sure. Loogy's Kingdom is now working towards a bubu-free future.

THE KINGDOM OF PRUJHA

By: Alyona Ivanov September 13th, 1989

Background: Alyona Ivanov was a Russian prisoner that was sent to the slave country of Prujha the winter of 1981 and witnessed the failed First Revolution of Prujha. From then on she supported anti-slave rhetoric and anti-cc principles. On September 13th 1989, a year after Prujha's 'independence', she went out in protest along with hundreds of others. They were all slaughtered by the Queen's orders. This diary entry of hers has been dubbed, "The Kingdom of Prujha" by the ACA (Anti CC Association). Original was in Ol Prujhen.

September 13th, 1988, exactly one year ago. The streets that once were red were now clean. The people were happy and waving the new flag of a new country. And Anadyr was greeted by the presence of their old leader, known only as the Frog.

He steps upon a podium, guarded by many guards, and says,

"People! People hear me! Today is the day that you all will become free. I know that your years of work for me have not been easy. I know you have fought for this day. You older men and women have carried good blood to your children, and your children have fought. Many have died. But it is through their payment of this good blood that I am shown that Prujha is worthy of independence. Therefore, from this day forth, I pronounce Prujha as The Kingdom of Prujha!"

It was then that my excitement was crushed. A Kingdom? A Kingdom is not a free system. It is one where royalty gets all the power, and everyday people like us are thrown into the dirt to suffer. Have we not suffered enough? We were freed, only to be enslaved again. Don't you see that the Frog has us in his pocket still? Queen Kasba is another one of his many puppets! When will it be time that we, the people of Prujha, unite and form a country of our own? How long will we endure the 'rehabilitation' projects of the Frog's demented mind before our own minds crumble? I've seen minds crumble in many around me. Their spirits were broken. Their beliefs were squandered. People were forced into becoming food, and those broken enough were enjoying their flesh of their brothers and sisters. Today is not a day to be proud of. We are the embodiment of demons, the force of evil. If the monarch continues to exist, then we will only suffer more. How long before they kill me for writing this? How long, O how long? Before I'm strung up naked in the streets.

KEVIN ALMOST ARRESTED AFTER SUCCESSFUL DATE WITH GIRL!

The great Kevin was almost captured on October 7th by CPD for contraband possession while riding the Red Line after a successful date with a girl.

The morning of that day started like any other for Kevin. Only today, he was set to woo the heart of a girl he's had eyes on for a while.

"[I started talking to her] like many weeks ago." Said Kevin.

When the time came, it was an instant success! He took the Hispanic dove out for a night on the town. They shared common interests, like both enjoying the Fast and Furious franchise. They went to Target and bought some things together. Kevin was ecstatic and admitted to being a little nervous, so when her mom picked her up, and it was all over, Kevin wanted to celebrate with some relaxation.

"[I] wanted to trip balls after a successful date, but [god] damn doggies smell it all." Said Kevin.

He was getting home on the Red Line when CPD came on board with K-9 units. Frightened at the scene of police, Kevin had no choice but to abandon his celebratory contraband. But this is no disappointing ending to Kevin, despite the circumstances, as Kevin had a successful date. A successful date that might go down in history as the first of many. And if she is anything like the Great Kevin, they might just find a good time to celebrate together, if you can catch my drift.

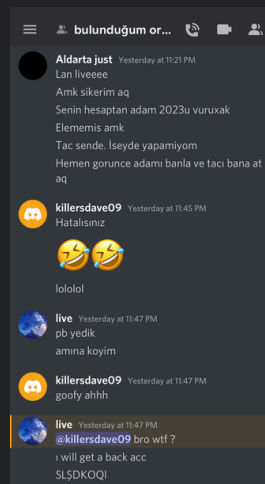

"F*ck mane the police officer has a fat ass but damn I gotta throw this shit out" - Kevin

🎃 JEAN, JESS & VIBBO CAMPING 🎃

This past weekend (7th, 8th & 9th), Jean took Vibbo & Jess camping at Woodhaven Lakes. This trip marked a year since last year's trip, which included many more people. But despite this, the trip was a massive success. They took part in activities such as petting farm animals in the petting zoo, designing mugs, and thrift shopping. They look forward to bringing the homies to Six Flags for a reunion to share the fun of this great and spooky time.

🔓 Hacked & Nitroless 🔓

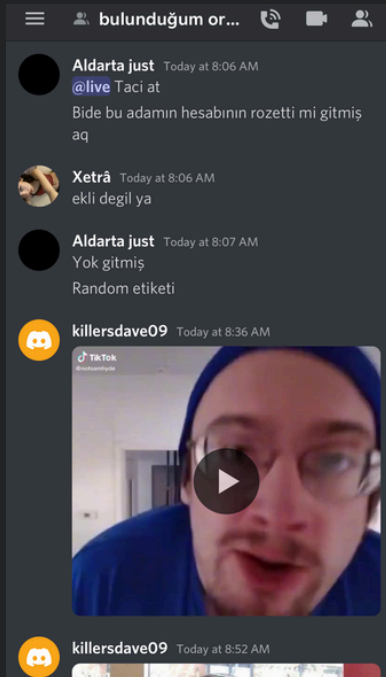

Longtime server member and brother to Vibbo Munts was cyber-attacked yesterday by a group of Turkish hackers! In the photo, you can see how Killersdave09 regained control of his account from the attack. "[It was a] keylogger, lol." Said Dave. "I was overconfident." This comes in light of the loss of the server's boosts, as Dave's nitro was abused during the attack to boost another server. Upon regaining control, Discord suspended transactions from the account.

Hacked & Nitroless

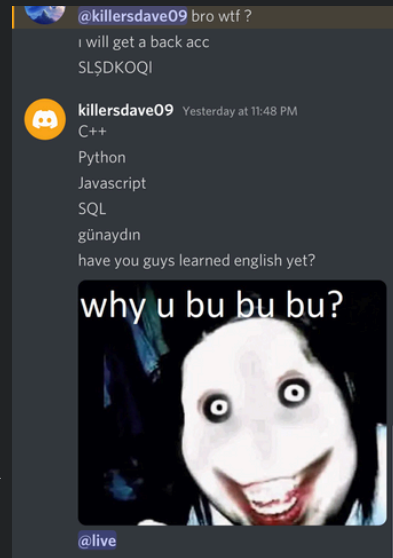

Despite losing his nitro, Dave was eager to fight back during the attack, sending trolling messages to his attackers.

"I was in a group DM with a bunch of Turkish dudes, and I was mod for the server that they boosted, so when I got my account back, I changed all the stuff in the server to MLP," Dave said. You can see the panic in the response of one of the Turkish hackers, "@KillersDave09 bro wtf? I will get a back acc." Through the broken English, it was likely meant to read, "I will get the account back." Which ultimately did not happen. But from this victory comes another problem. The server. Without the boosts, the server will return to default discord in 2 days.

But will we miss any of the benefits if they did indeed go? Sure, the benefits of higher-quality audio and streaming are a given disappointment. But the emojis? The stickers? Well, as it turns out, we don't even use the extra 50 emojis or the extra 10 stickers the boost gives us. But what about the server invite banner? Or an animated server icon? Those might spark some dismay, namely the lean god in the invite banner. The effects of losing these benefits are unknown, but many would argue that they wouldn't want to find out even if the effects weren't serious. We've only known a boosted server. Luckily, Dave's brother, Vibbo Munts, has opted to take over the boogster role. Saying, "I'll be rich in no time, so I can afford it."

Despite this, we still have to see if Dave's nitro can return to him in time to save the server. If he is willing to do so.

"Hobo Crow"

'HOBO CROW' ARRESTED FOR STEALING BABY FOOD

Corbin Johnson, AKA Hobo Crow, was arrested yesterday for going to fifteen stores across his bustling city of New Pork and stealing over $100,000 in baby food.

"This man is despicable and should be behind bars all his life!" said Police Chief Wallace.

While the true motives are unknown, many witnesses claimed he was mumbling to himself, "After these are gone, the babies will have nothing to eat!"

"What are my babies going to eat?" Said one troubled mom.

'The Average Victim'

Hobo Crow has yet to reveal where he has stashed the baby food despite being captured. City officials are scrambling to subdue the growing discontent with the lack of baby food. Offering 'baby food 2' as a substitute.

"Baby food 2 is a scam; everybody here knows it." Said a protestor, "You can't just give a baby creamy sawdust and call it a day."

This claim was countered by the city's public healthcare executive, Franklin D'Frank, "Everybody knows that babies eat sawdust. It's a simple fact of nature."

Following the release of 'baby food 2', sixteen babies are said to be in declining health due to the sawdust. When asked about this, Franklin replied, "Ok, and?"

'baby food 2'

This sparked citywide outrage. If you or someone you know might have any information as to where Hobo Crow stored the baby food, please contact Supergae's hotline below,
